GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S. and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is genuinely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling -- and their parents, too!

Important news: Tomosynthesis with digital mammography yields better cancer detection rates.

Southampton Hospital

A groundbreaking study proves Tomosynthesis (3D imaging) coupled with digital mammography increases cancer detection rates. It actually provides greater accuracy in pinpointing size, shape and location of abnormalities, and with Tomosynthesis there's a greater likelihood of identifying additional tumors. This technology is available at The Ellen Hermanson Breast Center thanks to the generosity of The Ellen Hermanson Foundation. Get state-of-the-art diagnostics and treatment. South Fork regulars Vice President Joe Biden and his wife, Dr. Jill Biden, attended a recent performance of Edward Albee's A Delicate Balance, a Broadway revival starring Glenn Close, John Lithgow and Bridgehampton's Bob Balaban. The play runs through Feb. 22 at the John Golden Theatre.

Congratulations, Julianne Moore! The Montauk resident earned a Golden Globe nomination for Best Actress in a Drama last week for her performance in the upcoming film Still Alice. Moore stars in the film with Amagansett's Alec Baldwin. The 72nd Golden Globe Awards air Jan. 11.

A new documentary starring Water Mill's Jennifer Lopez will premiere on HBO on New Year's Eve. Jennifer Lopez: Dance Again goes behind the scenes of the superstar's 2012 world tour. Lopez said in a statement, "I wanted to tell a story, to open myself up to people. This documentary brings back so many incredible memories and I am so excited to relive the tour, and once again, share these experiences with my fans."

Amagansett's Scarlett Johansson enjoyed dinner with husband Romain Dauriac and their newborn daughter at Townline BBQ in Sagaponack last week. The Dan's Papers trivia team ate there that evening too. Great minds.

In other Scarlett Johansson news, the popular actress was one of this year's Most Fascinating People, as selected by Southampton's Barbara Walters for Walters' annual television special. Broadcast last Sunday, the special also featured interviews with Oprah Winfrey, Neil Patrick Harris, Michael Strahan, David Koch and Chelsea Handler.

Water Mill's Matt Lauer hosted Billboard Magazine's Women in Music Panel, held in New York City, last Friday. After the Q&A session, Lauer posted a selfie with event attendees Taylor Swift, Aretha Franklin, Ariana Grande, Idina Menzel and others. Lauer captioned the photo, "Billboard Magazine's women in music for 2014 and one very lucky old bald guy!"

The Forbes 2014 list of the Top 10 Highest-Paid Musicians includes some East Enders: Beyoncé at #2 with $115 million Jon Bon Jovi's band Bon Jovi comes in at #4 with $82 million and Amagansett's Paul McCartney is eighth at $71 million. Might Southold's Brady Rymer join this list next year? Rymer (Cont'd on page 46)

LINE HOME CONSTRUCTION INC.

Twas the night before Christmas and all through the land,
People were hoping to see Santa firsthand.

When up on the roof, what did we hear,
It was Santa, his sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer.

Then with a crash and a boom, the ceiling came down,
Yes, Santa and friends were scattered around!

Without a complaint, a whimper, or whine
He just smiled and said "you have to call Line!"

Yes, Line Home Construction will do this job fast,
A new Cedar roof that will be sturdy and last.

He looked up through the hole where he had just parked
"I have more gifts to deliver, I must now embark.

Come Donner, come Blitzen, don't scuff up the floor,
I always feel funny when we use the front door.

I don't want to skip you on this night next year,
So use Line Roofing & Siding and I'll see you my dears!"

DOWN IN THE TUBE

Madonna, in riding gear, was seen on the Hamptons Subway traveling between Water Mill and Bridgehampton carrying several bags of Christmas gifts. Mayor Mark Epley of Southampton was spotted taking the short trip between the Main Street stop and the Coopers Beach stop on Friday. He told our photographer he was out inspecting the tunnels in the village. Henry Hildreth was seen on the subway carrying golf clubs from Southampton to Hampton Bays on Thursday afternoon. He also had a bag of red golf balls.

DELAY AT WESTHAMPTON BEACH

There was a 30-minute delay system-wide as a result of two men dressed as a reindeer getting caught in the closing doors at the Westhampton Beach platform on Christmas morning at 11 a.m. The trains backed up. First it was the antlers, then it was the rear hooves and tail. Things kept going wrong. We regret the delay.

FLAGMEN CELEBRATE

Hamptons Subway is the only subway system in the country that still has flagmen out in the tunnels that hold out flags to "stop" and "go" the oncoming trains. The flagmen have green flags, orange flags and red flags. Red is stop, green is go. Orange is slow. Most systems replaced their flagmen with electronic traffic lights in the tunnels years ago, and Hamptons Subway was one system that did that. However, the flagmen's union for Hamptons Subway pointed out the clause in their contract that says they can never be replaced unless they walk off their jobs, and they have never walked off their jobs. Currently the two systems work concurrently, so the motorman sees the light first, and then the flagmen. Usually, they two will wave to one another, but if they do and the flagman is holding up a flag different than the light, the motorman obeys the light and considers the flagman just being friendly. Anyway, the system works. And the flagmen's union has rented the Southampton Platform for New Year's Eve beginning at 11:30 p.m. to watch the ball drop there. A total of over 200 current and former flagmen will be in attendance, each with their own set of personal flags. Flagmen, when they retire, are by contract allowed to retire with their flags. The subway system remains open until 2 a.m. as usual on New Years Eve (an earlier plan to shut at 11:30 was overruled by the Commissioner), so if you're a straphanger trying to catch a train, grab a beer and offer a salute as you pass through the party.

A REMINDER

All the trains head out to the Montauk Yard after closing time for nightly maintenance, so if you are found asleep in a subway car out there when its past 2 a.m., you'll be hosed down with the rest of the car.

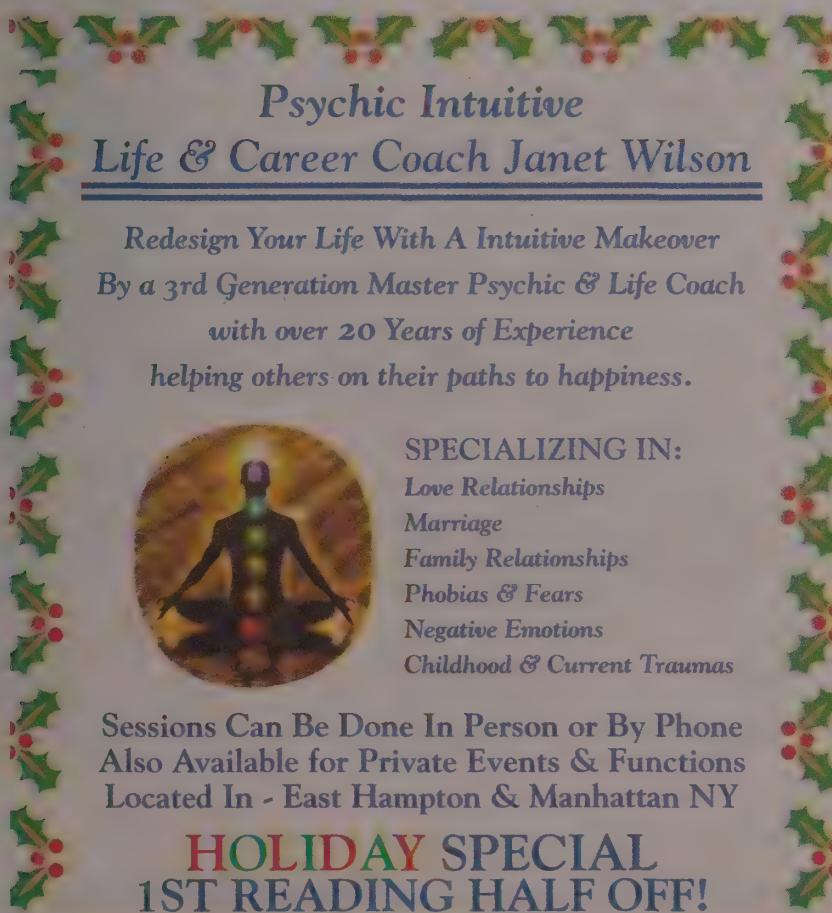

Coffee is served on the Montauk platform from a big urn by the maintenance staff there to those sleepy, bedraggled folks who got hosed down. They also each get a gift noisemaker. It's an annual tradition.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY CARL PHILLIPS

Come help Carl Phillips celebrate his birthday on New Year's Day—he was born on that day—in the company cafeteria in the Hamptons Subway building in Hampton Bays at 2 pm. Carl is 22, works in maintenance and his mom and dad were both asleep and hosed down in Montauk just before he was born. That's the only time that's ever happened.

CRITICAL CELL ACTIVITY

Federal authorities became involved last week when a professor at a local college insisted that his students refrain from using their cell phones while in class. Several of the students defied the professor's injunction, pulled out their phones during class and engaged in what appeared to be frivolous texting and/or web browsing. The professor, angered by what he perceived to be brazen defiance of his authority, summarily confiscated the phones in question. Officials admit that what happened next, while highly regrettable, could not have been anticipated by the professor. It turns out that one of the students, although he appeared to just be sending an endless series of redundant texts to his girlfriend, was in fact helping to facilitate a docking operation at the International Space Station—a docking operation that wound up being canceled because the student lost contact with the spacecraft when his cell phone was taken. Another of the students, who appeared as if she were idly searching the web for discount Uggs, was in fact engaged in delicate nuclear negotiations with Iran on behalf of the State Department—her sudden removal from the talks turned out to be a major setback in international relations. A third student, who seemed as if he was just playing a mindless game, was actually in the midst of intervening in a hostage situation—the fate of the hostages he was trying to rescue is currently unknown. After federal authorities explained the situation, the professor was contrite: "Whatever outward appearances might be, the fact is that most young people who are glued to their cell phones instead of paying attention to the world around them are probably engaged in solving matters of life and death. Lesson learned!"

CAUSE FOR CONCERN

Police concerns were raised as a local group of concerned citizens held a demonstration this past weekend. Police spokesman Larry Hersch noted that the demonstration, while peaceful, was cause for concern under the circumstances. "People are concerned, and police need to be concerned about that," Hersch explained. "If they continue to be concerned, then we will become very concerned." Local officials, understandably concerned, were happy to allow demonstrators to express their concern peacefully, but urged them to make their concern known to regional authorities. "It seems clear that the sooner their concern is communicated to those in the best position to address their concern, the sooner their concern will be addressed." However, county and state officials, called upon to comment about the group's concern, expressed a relative lack of concern, calling it "a local concern." Watch this space for further developments.

Police Alert

This GPS Will Take You to the Hamptons Whether You Like It or Not

BY DAN RATTINER

At a press conference at Police Headquarters in lower Manhattan last Thursday, New York City Police Commissioner Bill Bratton issued a warning to all well-to-do New York City residents about a bogus internet app that, no matter what you do, takes you to the Hamptons.

"It is called GPS+PLUS," the Commissioner said. "If you get in your car in front of your apartment on Fifth Avenue, for example, and you punch in any destination outside of New York City, it will override that and will instead take you to one of the villages on eastern Long Island. It is highly sophisticated. It randomly picks a village. It could be Sag Harbor or Remsenberg, Cutchogue or Montauk. It adopts the voice on your cellphone GPS so it sounds like it's taking you to where you want to go. Also, it mentions villages and towns along the way to your punched in destination, but as I said, the last comment 'you have arrived at your destination' is false. You will have arrived in the Hamptons. Also, it is only active on Fridays. The rest of the week, it takes you where you want to get to."

Police Commissioner Bratton says he doesn't know the ins and outs of how this works, but his technical department is working on it. What he does say is that it only shows up on a list of your apps when you search for "enhanced GPS" or "GPS+PLUS" or "GPS for the rich." It is, he said, "a wolf in sheep's clothing." He said there could be other search terms that would lead to it but those are the ones they've found so far.

"How does it know if a user is rich?" a reporter for CNN asked.

"That's the most remarkable thing. It seems to be connected up to the database of New York City homeowners whose tax returns show an income of more than $10 million a year."

"What about New York City homeowners who also own or rent in the Hamptons but have their official residences in the Hamptons?" the reporter from FOX asked.

"Them too," the Commissioner said. "It's the damnedest thing."

"What if you have GPS+PLUS on your cellphone but you have a car with a driver and he doesn't have it on his," the reporter from New York magazine asked.

"It hops. We don't know how. If you get in the back seat, it hops to any cellphone of anybody in the driver's seat. It also hops to commercial GPS systems like Garmin."

"What about helicopters?"

"Jumps to the pilot."

"So, these apps are (Cont'd on next page)" available from a person's cell phone app store?" a reporter for the Post asked.

"Yes."

"Why does Apple or Android or Blackberry continue to allow these apps to be sold on their app sites?"

"They are not on Blackberry. As for the others, we think it is because the app GPS+PLUS is hooked up to many of their upscale advertisers who have stores in the Hamptons. If in New York City, you punch in clothing stores near me, for example, it gives you upscale clothing stores in Manhattan near your location but it also gives you Ralph Lauren, Ellie Tahari and Tory Burch sites in the Hamptons. Of course we're not sure this is the reason."

"Have you made any arrests about this?" asked a CBS reporter.

"We've rounded up the usual suspects," the Commissioner said. "But they're just the usual suspects. So we let them go."

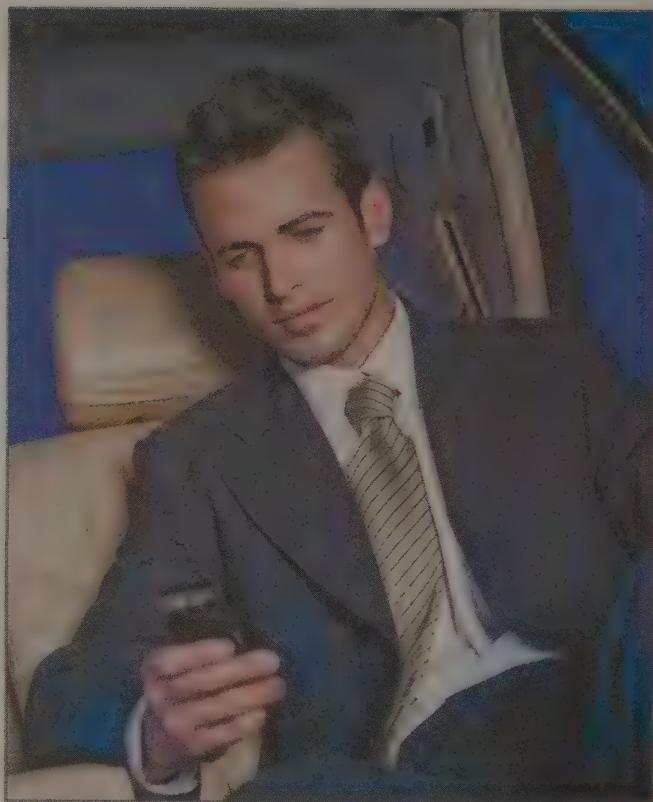

"Any others?"

"Our investigation has uncovered tax fraud, two Ponzi schemes and 11 cases of insider trading violations nobody knew about. So that's something. We've turned those over to the DA."

"Any leads?"

"We think the Hampton Chamber of Commerce might be behind this. But we can't get access to their phone data, because of the new regulations. We're trying to get Homeland Security to move on this."

"You think this is about terrorism?"

Thinkstock.com

"No. It also might be Russians. Or maybe the Chinese. Or maybe Bill Belichick from the New England Patriots. One lead took us there. Don't worry. We'll catch these perps."

"How did you learn about this?" a reporter from The Wall Street Journal asked:

"We've had numerous reports of wealthy hedge fund managers, rock stars and investment bankers wandering around the Hamptons in a daze. Many of them, those who summer in Bedford or Chappaqua, have never been in the Hamptons before. They don't know what to make of it, and don't know where they are."

"Has this been going on a long time?"

"We have no idea. But we consider it a vicious threat to our way of life."

"How long do you think it will take before you get to the bottom of this?"

"We've got half the New York City police force working on this case. Also all the K9 police dogs. I hope to have something further to say in a week."

"Any advice we can pass on to our readers and users?"

"Don't download GPS+PLUS. And if you've got it, delete it. Fast. Especially before you get into the backseat of any vehicle where it might jump to someone else. Also, use the Hampton Jitney as much as possible. For some reason, it doesn't jump to drivers of the Jitney or their Ambassador class service. And maybe consider dumping your Android and Apple and getting a Blackberry."

No, never mind. Forget I said that. Also, if you have a suspicion that you are being taken to the Hamptons without realizing it, well, you've realized it. Nothing to be done. Just sit back and enjoy it."

"Thank you Mr. Commissioner."

"You're very welcome."

Two Art Stories

1: Dealer vs. Collector 2: Forged Jackson Pollocks in East Hampton

BY DAN RATTINER

A two-year-long feud between billionaire Ron Perelman of East Hampton and world-renowned art gallery owner Larry Gagosian of Amagansett has ended with a court ruling in favor of Gagosian. Reading the vitriol thrown around by the lawyers for these two men, even after the decision, it seems unlikely that their long friendship, torn asunder by this lawsuit two years ago, will be on the mend anytime soon. After the decision, Gagosian lawyers declared Perelman a "bully." Also after the decision, Perelman lawyers referred to Gagosian as "unscrupulous." And there was a lot worse.

The matter primarily concerned three works of art that Perelman agreed to buy from Gagosian. Over the years the men had done many deals. They would be paid for in cash by Perelman, or even in cash accompanied by other lesser-valued paintings that Gagosian would take in to resell, at a profit, to other customers.

The dispute centered around the unfinished work "Popeye" by Jeff Koons—for which Perelman was to pay $4 million—and eight additional works that he planned to use to pay Gagosian for a $10.5 million Cy Twombly painting and a $12.5 million Richard Serra sculpture, according to The New York Times.

There were two sales agreements at issue—between the Gagosian Gallery and MAFG Art Fund, a separate company that represented Perelman. In 2012, Perelman filed a lawsuit claiming fraud, alleging that Gagosian had artificially inflated the price of the Twombly painting by having a third party buy the work prior to making it available to him. As for the "Popeye" sculpture by Koons, Perelman claimed that at the time Perelman was buying it for $4 million, Gagosian knew that Perelman intended to resell it at a higher price but that the art dealer never told him that there was also a side deal with Koons that, if it were sold for more in a resale, a further commission would have to be paid to Koons, thus reducing the value at a resale. Because Gagosian was refusing to allow this resale to go through without this encumbrance, Perelman claimed that Gagosian, as a longtime "trusted advisor and friend," should have told him about it in advance, and because he didn't this too constituted fraud.

During the course of this trial, lower court judge Barbara Kapnick advised the two men to settle their differences "at a cocktail party." When that did not happen, she then ruled that the case could proceed, and then, in February, she tossed five of the six claims against Gagosian but ruled the fraud claim had legal merit. And last week, by a vote of 5–0, the appeals court ruled the fraud claim, too, was unwarranted, thus ending the saga.

The essence of the case seemed to hinge on whether Gagosian was a "trusted advisor" or not. If he were, then this might have been fraud. But the judge ruled that the plaintiffs had not made that case.

The ruling states that these were business transactions that had taken place at an arms-length basis. Gagosian had his gallery. Perelman was using his company MAFG Art Fund. As a result, what the paintings and sculptures were worth was a matter of opinion. A seller would want more, a buyer less. And in that regard Perlman should have done due diligence, the ruling said, and he had not.

Part of the decision also hinged upon whether or not Gagosian should have been obliged, after the sale, to have told Perlman about the new obligations involved in a resale. The judge said she could only rely on what was in writing. And in writing, in that agreement, it only said that Gagosian was confirming that the sculpture was by Jeff Koons and that the price for it would be $4 million. That's all there was. There was nothing in it to guarantee that the value of the paintings was a fair price. That was a matter of opinion, and therefore not a matter for the court. It was buyer beware.

In another legal action involving art, this time in criminal court, an East Hampton man named John Re has pleaded guilty in federal court to one count of wire fraud following his arrest on charges of having sold, beginning in 2005, fake Jackson Pollock and Willem de Kooning paintings as if they were real.

At the time Re put them up for sale, he claimed he'd found these paintings in 1999 at the home of George Schulte, who operated an antiques-restoring business on Springs Close Highway in Amagansett until the mid '90s, before he passed away in 1999. Re said he stumbled upon them because he had been hired to clean the premises, and that (Continued on next page) he'd found the paintings in the basement. He also said he had letters from the Schulte family which proved they were real, which now, it turns out, he admits, they are not. According to the FBI, he sold these paintings for roughly $2.5 million during the last nine years.

In 1995, Re was sentenced to 2 to 7 years in prison after pleading guilty to being involved with a group of people forging counterfeit $20 bills and putting them into circulation.

In more recent times, he has piloted a submarine, built, he said, for action in World War II, which he had bought as an antique. The name of the sub was the U.S.S. Deep Quest. He'd take it up and down the inland waterway, stopping here and there so journalists in coastal towns could interview him for the local community. Reportedly, he was willing to sell the sub when the price was right.

This sub was seized by the FBI when their agents took possession of his premises after the court ruling, and they now have it floating somewhere. But at least one expert says this is a fake, too, or is just a replica of a prop for a movie that was once made. The real

Predictions 2015

Everything We Said Would Happen in 2014 Came True. Here's 2015.

BY DAN RATTINER

Vladimir Putin, in an attempt to get back onto the good side of America, offers to give Crimea back to the Ukrainians in exchange for the Americans giving Shelter Island to Russia. The offer is accepted. Most Shelter Islanders protest this, saying they don't want to change, but the United States goes ahead anyway. Afterwards, Shelter Islanders say it's not so bad after all. After that, all the sanctions are lifted.

In January, the Next Big Thing is announced in Silicon Valley. All you have to do is think something. Your smartphone will pick it up, note your location and name and report it to the proper authorities.

In April, the Army Corps of Engineers builds a tremendous 10-mile-long revetment of boulders to protect the shoreline of downtown Montauk, but in May a huge rogue wave rears up and tears it out. Montaukers report there is no other damage.

A local high school, which gave up football last year because there were too few kids willing to try out for the team (their parents were concerned they'd get injured), now gives up soccer. During tryouts, a popular sophomore gets hit in the nose with a soccer ball while not looking, causing him to have a nosebleed. "We will not allow any sport of any kind to be played at our high school that might in any way cause a student to be injured, whether physically or psychologically," the principal says. "And to that end, we are installing a surveillance and alarm system that will alert the soccer players by the sound of a horn that an incoming object is about to arrive so they have enough time to duck down and avoid it."

Edward Snowden, his one-year stay in Russia over, is told he will have to go somewhere else. And he does. On January 13, the day after he is given this information, he vanishes. A friend calls 911 and tells them what happened. "He was sitting in front of his computer and he pressed a few buttons and then, suddenly, his body rose, turned 90 degrees and just got itself sucked right into his screen. Honest to God."

Congress passes a comprehensive law that will keep the country going for another year, but this law also includes new legislation that removes some of the restrictive laws that put restraints on risky Wall Street security transactions. The stock market surges as a result, sending the Dow screaming to a new high of 41,812 in 24 hours, only to have it go into a nosedive and crash to the ground, throwing the country into chaos. Democrats everywhere say, "I told you so."

A new, glamorous, but very thin singing sensation named Bony Maronie appears on the scene in March. Her song "Shake Your Tush" goes platinum in 10 hours. All across America, fans start wearing pink sunglasses and yellow baseball caps covered with rhinestones and lose the tremendous amounts of weight that are necessary to be eligible to join Bony Maronie fan clubs that pop up everywhere in abandoned Burger Kings and McDonald's restaurants. President Obama declares a state of emergency.

In February, a Wall Street investment banker buys a small oceanfront two-bedroom home on four acres in Southampton and tears it down to replace it with a much larger and very modern eight-bedroom house. In April, next door, a corporate raider buys another small oceanfront two-bedroom home on four acres and tears that down to build a large 12-bedroom house in the Georgian style. The investment banker, who has not yet moved in, decides he does not like the size nor the Georgian design of the corporate raider's house next door and so, to get away, sells his eight-bedroom modern house to a Russian (Continued on next page) oligarch who tears the investment banker's modern house down and builds a 16-bedroom house in the style of a czarist Russian palace. But then in June, the corporate raider, who has not yet moved into his eight-bedroom Georgian mansion, decides he doesn't like the design of the Russian oligarch's new palace next door and so sells out to a Mexican drug lord who tears down the corporate raider's 12-bedroom house and builds one that consists of 22 bedrooms. This continues on like this for months. New arrivals include a Spanish princess who tears down the 16-bedroom for a 26-bedroom, and the heir to a dog food fortune who tears down the 22-bedroom to build a 30-bedroom. But in December, the head of a wildly successful Silicon Valley start-up buys both properties, neither of which has ever had a new house lived in on it, tears everything down and gives the merged eight acres to the Nature Conservancy as a tax deduction.

The Hamptons Subway system is sold to the New York City Subway System and Hamptons Subway Commissioner Bill Aspinall moves to Palm Beach.

A store pops up suddenly on Jobs Lane in Southampton on July 1, injuring two.

Due to an error in some architectural plans, road builders appear, extend the Sunrise Highway all the way to Montauk and then, by causeway, continue crazily out to Block Island and Martha's Vineyard.

Could you be looking at the hottest new mode of transportation to and from the Hamptons?

Because the noise above the East Hampton Airport is so deafening to the locals who live below, a deal is made in May to ban all aircraft and helicopters. This results in tremendous numbers of wealthy people arriving by blimp. The locals find the blimps very spooky. They protest, saying the blimps sneak up on you while sunning at the pool, when you least expect it, suddenly putting you into shade and then releasing you back into the sunshine and this is not tolerable. They also say that when the blimps arrive, they are preceded by what smells like gas from the time they appear on the horizon until the passengers have climbed down the rope ladder to the runway. NO MORE BLIMPS is the rallying cry.

The deer in North Haven organize, take over Village Hall, take down the American flag on the flagpole out front and, in its place, raise a pennant that features the silhouette of a white deer on a tan background.

In Water Mill in July, wild Asian bamboo newly planted adjacent to a house sends rapidly moving roots out underground one rainy night, lifts up the house and eats it. Three people go missing.

Also in July, the wild weather predicted to arrive over the Hamptons during the summertime appears in the form of two hurricanes, one arriving from the south and the other arriving from the north. They crash into each other directly above the Bridgehampton Founders Memorial, and the resulting rainbow is simply the most beautiful anyone has ever seen.

Another hurricane marches up the Atlantic in early December, is told it's too late, and then turns around and heads the other way.

LONG ISLAND CHILDREN ARE HUNGRY AND THE NEED IS CRITICAL.

Even a small gift can make a large difference to a hungry family.

Now, more than ever, your fellow Long Islanders are in need of help from their neighbors. Lost jobs, closed businesses, down-sizing, foreclosures, devastation from Super Storm Sandy ... all have led to more people, adults and children, with empty plates on their tables.

Your donation, even as little as $10, can feed a hungry child for 7 days.

While over 95 cents out of every dollar contributed to Island Harvest goes directly to Long Island's hungry, more contributions are needed to keep up with the demand.

Reflecting on Peace, Remembrance and Thanks

BY JAMES KEITH PHILLIPS

Now that the holiday season is full upon us, it seems like a good time to slow things down from the hustle and bustle and remember what the holiday hubbub is really about. Though the predominant message we get is often buy, buy, buy, there are some who truly do have the goodness of the season in their hearts.

On a recent weekend on Shinnecock, a Memorial Walk was held, dedicated to the memories of those tribal members who had passed on and to honor those who remain. Shinnecock is a small and insular tribal community, where every passing is felt acutely and deeply—and as everyone knows, the pain of loss can last for a long, long time. We've had some young members pass in the last few years before their time; they are missed even more acutely, perhaps, for the promise of a future that will never be realized. We will never know who could have become what and how they would have benefited the nation. It was in this spirit that the Memorial Walk was organized.

The participants for the Memorial Walk met in the community center, where tables were set up with breakfast food, along with a pot of homemade chili, corn bread, coffee and other foods and beverages. Materials were available for participants to make posters about those we hold in our hearts and want to honor, and to convey messages about suicide, drug and alcohol abuse, and some of the other ills that have affected the Shinnecock people. Participants trickled in and gathered to talk, while making tobacco bundles for prayers that would then be tossed into a ceremonial fire across from the Shinnecock church.

James K. Phillips

The fire has been kept lit since this summer, as a beacon of hope against violence against women and other tribal members. It has become an ad hoc meeting place of sorts, where people gather to talk about any recent dark happenings in the community and seek a way to resolve them.

The walk was from the fire to the cemetery; first in one direction for those we've lost and then the opposite way for those who are still with us in need of our support and prayers. A group of singers and a hand drummer lead the procession, with walkers following. Although it's a relatively short walk from the church to the cemetery, it can also be the longest when it's a loved one who's being laid to rest.

The water of Shinnecock Bay that day was like glass, and the sky a beautiful azure blue. The procession paused to look out over the view, before continuing back to the fire to make prayers and speak about loved ones. Then it continued in the opposite direction.

It was at the fire that I witnessed an amazing sight: proof that someone up there is listening to our prayers and watching out for us. As one of the women spoke about the need for healing from the hurt we have all experienced and how the walk was not only to mourn, but also to celebrate the joy that our loved ones, deceased and living, bring to us every day, two swans flew over the steeple of the church. I've asked others if they saw them too, but so far only two people said they did. Some said they heard the wings, some said they were so engrossed in their own thoughts nothing got through and most were staring into the fire contemplating their own thoughts and prayers.

I believe we have survived for as long as we have because there is truly a higher power somewhere, somehow, looking out for us. It's the only way I can explain that here we are today on our little peninsula of heaven with our backs to the sea and surrounded by people still conspiring to take the little that we have left.

It is the season of thanksgiving, as well as the celebration of most world religions. If you listen, read, or watch the news, it seems that the world is going to hell in the proverbial handbasket. Don't believe it. Instead, believe that there is always hope and there is always love. And thank whatever deity you believe in for whatever time you get to spend loving and being loved. It's really what the season is all about, after all. Sometimes, just walking with the memories of those lost and the love of those who are left does the trick. Happy holidays. Peace to all.

BY SALLY FLYNN

"Lewis, what does that new sign say over the entrance to the farm?"

"Don't know Shirley, but I heard it says free-range turkeys, pre-seasoned for all tastes."

"Darn I wish we turkeys could read."

"When turkeys fly, my dear. When turkeys fly...."

"Let's go hang out with the Mexican turkeys, Lewis. They get to eat all those delicious beans and peppers and they have tequila in their water pans."

"No Shirley, they have jalapeño peppers in their beans. Haven't you ever noticed how they all have burnt tail feathers?"

"Okay. Well, the German turkeys are fed bratwurst, sour kraut and beer. Let's hang out with them."

"Maybe, but only for a little while. Once they get drunk, they get into arguments with the Japanese turkeys over who builds the better import cars. We could visit the Scottish turkeys, but nobody understands what they're saying."

"How about the British turkeys Lewis? They are very polite. They drink tea and try to solve the mystery about where turkeys go after they are bought."

"We go to a forever home, just like dogs and cats. What home is complete without a turkey?"

We fertilize the carpet, eat crumbs off the floor, and peck children who won't get out of bed."

"We could visit the Polynesian turkeys. They have coconut milk and seafood. Plus, I love those flower necklaces that they eat."

"We'll be social tomorrow, Shirley. Let's go back to our own group. Back to Guinness Beer and boiled potatoes and turkeys who tell grand stories."

"Fine, but if they get drunk and try to get us to riverdance again, I'm leaving for the Mexican guys."

"Hey look, those two ladies who just pulled up are looking at us."

"Oh Lewis, maybe we'll get adopted! Look, one lady brought a big metal container. She wants us to come over."

"Yes she does, this could be our big day! She wants me to sit in the container. Maybe she's planning to make it into a bed for me."

"Oh, isn't that lovely? And the other lady wants me. Oh, Lewis, she's squeezing my thighs and... Hey! Stop that! My, but she's getting personal."

"Look honey, they're paying for us. We're free! We're gonna have families! We'll have cats and dogs to talk to and I will be given a spot on the couch!"

"I'm gonna sleep on the bed with them Lewis. They'll pet me and occasionally give me a nice bath. I'll show them what an excellent watch turkey I make by gobbling in alarm whenever somebody comes to the door."

"Oh boy Shirley, it looks like we'll get to travel together in the back of the car. You think there's any chance we might be going to live in the same house?"

"My, that was a short ride Lewis. They're pulling into a farm. Who's that man walking toward the car? He's covered in feathers and what's that in his hand?"

"Uh-oh. Be quiet, Shirley. I think that's an axe in his hand and I'm starting to get a bad feeling about this..."

"Do you think he could be one of those ax-murderers? Like in the movies?"

"No Shirley. Ax murderers all wear hockey masks. Maybe he had to execute a turkey with an attitude problem like Big Jake."

"You mean Mr. 'My comb is bigger than your comb'?"

"Yup. We all knew he had the biggest comb, that's why we called him Big Jake, but he never passed up a chance to rub our beaks in it. He's gonna open the door. Stand up straight, Shirley. Act nonchalant."

"He's got me, Lewis!"

"Just stay calm and tell me what you see when he takes you behind the shed."

"Oh! Oh my God Lewis!"

"What is it Shirley? What is it?"

"Run Lewis! Run! It's a cookbook! It's a cookbook!"

If you didn't understand that last bit, you should watch more Twilight Zone. It's a good show. The marathon runs on the SyFy channel on New Year's Eve and New Year's Day. Happy holidays!

The East End Is Alive with the Sound of Music

BY STACY DERMONT

What's even better than live music? Live music served with food and drink. On the East End, there's "tasty" live music on offer year-round. Below are just a few of the options. Always call ahead for details, and to be sure that an event is not sold out—we East Enders love our music scene!

South Fork

Monday Open Mic at Fresh Hamptons

Every Monday from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m., you can hear what local musicians are writing these days—and some of their old favorites. If healthy is your thing, this is your restaurant.

Each night opens with the house band "Country Roast" and a headliner, followed by open mic. Arrive early to sign up to perform! Caroline Doctorow headlines January 12.

Fresh Hamptons, 203 Bridgehampton-Sag Harbor Turnpike, Bridgehampton. 631-537-4700, freshhamptons.com

Jazz Jam Thursdays

The joint is jumpin' with jazz—and fast-but-good food. The "jam" often involves professionals from far and wide, 7 to 9 p.m. every Thursday.

Bay Burger restaurant, 1742 Bridgehampton-Sag Harbor Turnpike, Sag Harbor, 631-899-3915, bayburger.com

Wölffer's Candlelight Fridays

Every Friday live music is paired with Wölffer wines or mulled cider and plates of charcuterie from 5 to 8 p.m. On December 26 Mamalee Rose sings R&B, Funk and Soul.

Wölffer Estate Vineyard, 139 Sagg Road, Sagaponack, 631-537-5106, wolffer.com

Fireside Sessions

Last but never least are Nancy Atlas's Fireside Sessions at Bay Street Theater in Sag Harbor, sponsored by Dan's Papers. These live concerts debuted last year and were a huge hit. Their relaxed vibe and top shelf talent entertained many full houses. Her first show of the year, on Jan. 2, with Red Hot Chili Peppers drummer Chad Smith, has been sold out for weeks, but tickets are still available for her other concerts in January and March. Special guests will include: Brian Mitchell, Randi Fishenfeld, Bill Sims Jr., Billy Campion, Billy Ryan and Arno Hecht.

North Fork Wineries

Baiting Hollow Farm Vineyard will have live music every weekend. You can often enjoy the sounds of Ricky Roche on Saturdays 2-6 p.m. Other upcoming Saturday performers include Southbound and The Smoking Gun. On Sun., Dec. 28 Denice Given and Conrad Taylor perform 2-6 p.m., followed by 3EZ on Sunday, January 4. Check the website for a detailed performance schedule.

Baiting Hollow Farm Vineyard, 2114 Sound Avenue, Baiting Hollow, 631-369-0100, baitinghollowfarmvineyard.com

Lieb Cellars Oregon Road hosts a Friday night music series, with a number of rotating artists playing from 6-9 p.m. Look for Jon DiVello on January 2. There's also often music on Saturdays, Nina Et Cetera plays live from 2-5 p.m. on Saturday, December 27.

Lieb Cellars has two North Fork tasting rooms at Lieb Cellars Oregon Road, 13050 Oregon Road, Cutchogue, 631-734-1100 and Lieb Cellars Mattituck (The Tasting Group), 35 Cox Neck Road, Mattituck, 631-298-1942, liebcellars.com

Martha Clara Vineyards has a number of musical guests slated to perform this winter including Joey Luongo 1-4 p.m. on Saturday, December 27 followed by New Life Crisis (doors open at 7 p.m.).

Honoring This Week's Cover Artist: Annie Sessler

BY STEPHANIE DE TROY

This week's cover art has a certain freshness and purity—fitting for the start to a new year. Artist Annie Sessler has captured, literally, the exquisite form of an octopus, un-ironically, in ink. Sessler's Montauk-based business, East End Fish Prints, is a team project with her husband Jim Goldberg. Sessler fills us in on the holistic, time-honored practice of fish prints.

The octopus is black and white—but what's that little red mark?

That's how I sign my prints. The whole fish-printing tradition is Asian, so typically there would be some kind of a block print for the signature. So you're looking back to that tradition, and the nice little red mark would give balance to the piece—it connects to Eastern philosophies, yin and yang, a universal symbol. Fullness in the void, everything in nothing. And the little "s" underneath is for my name. People respond to it and see all kinds of different things, so it's kind of a great identifier. In high school I took Intro to World Religions and was fascinated by Eastern philosophies—Confucianism, Taoism, Zen—it was a guiding force for that shape.

What kind of paper do you use?

Actually, 99% of my prints have been on different fabrics—Inherited, found, bought. This one is on satin. When I started doing this, my mother and father had been traveling around the world, and she had brought back Indian silks, fabrics from Hong Kong. But I even print on your common bed sheet. Paper is a whole world I'm starting to explore now that I'm starting to do reproductions.

What are the reproductions like?

Up until the past year I had only been doing originals. Reproductions are scanned digital photographs printed on cotton rag paper, or on silk dupioni. Materials range from sheer to thick.

Is it hard to print on thin textiles or papers?

You have to be delicate. You have to control the intensity of touch and know to back off. With some super-course fabrics you can't tell at all what it's going to look like. It's a blind rub, so you're hoping to cover the whole fish. It's always a surprise to see the reverse image. The rubbings are from the actual sea life and the subject is the creature itself. It's super fun.

How did you first get into it?

My husband is a commercial fisherman, surfer, a man of the ocean. One winter he asked if I wanted to make fish prints. I'd never heard of it and it totally floored me—it's so beautiful. As I watched him do it, it appeared effortless—I practically ripped the brush out of his hand. It's a nature gift-giving process and you can never totally control it—there's uncertainty, mystery, surprise, something you didn't intend.

This octopus was caught by offshore lobstermen. Oftentimes, my husband would be on a dragger and make selections of nice specimens to bring home for me to print, but now I have a lot of people bringing me fish. Some are exotic, or symbolic to them, so they call me up and we arrange a handoff.

The other cool thing is that we also travel to warm water and find other types of fish. And we use non-toxic ink, so we can both eat the fish afterward. And with kids, what child doesn't want to be involved? So with water-based ink, it washes right off. There's a great honoring of the fish. It's not just captured for art. The art is the middle part. Hunting, capturing the fish is the first part; the meal prepared would be the end.

How can people see more of your prints?

I do shows all the time throughout the year. People are welcome to see the online store, and in person is always the best way. There's a show coming up this spring at Ashwagh Hall. They're also shown at Lincoln Center, every year at the Montauk Art Show and at Crafts on Columbus on the Upper West Side in Manhattan. I recently had them over at noah's in Greenport, too.

Check out a winter beach workout: Jimmy Minardi hosts his popular Main Beach workouts year-round. Yes, that's right, you're invited to run through the sand even when it's mixed with snow. Visit minarditraining.com for more info.

Climb the Montauk Lighthouse: There are 137 steps to the top. Get in a workout and enjoy the beauty of the view from the top. Currently closed, the tower will re-open in the spring.

Bike: The East End is a great biking community. If you're up for a day's adventure, bike between the villages and hamlets instead of driving. If the trip there leaves you wiped, select Long Island Rail Road trains allow bikes on board, allowing for an easy trip back.

Enjoy a new yoga studio: Working yogis rejoice! Many studios now have a schedule that accommodates the 9-5. Offering surfset, yoga, Pilates and meditation, newly opened Well Within (wellwithinstudio.com) is located just outside East Hampton village. Also in East Hampton, the POE Yoga (poeyoga.com) has hot vinyasa, Minardi Surfer Yoga and indo/board yoga classes, and it's now open year-round.

Work out in the morning: Though there's nothing wrong with working out in the evening, exercising in the morning will help you to set a healthy tone for the day. Plus, you'll be able to say "yes" to spontaneous post-work plans.

Sign up for a race: There's nothing better to motivate yourself to become more fit than setting a timetable. The East End plays host to a number of road races throughout the year. Among the highest profile are the Shelter Island Run (10K) in June, Southampton's Ellen's Run (5K) in August and the Hamptons Marathon and Half in East Hampton in September. Pick a race far enough in the future to allow yourself to properly train, and get to work!

Try something new: This year, I'm resolving to challenge myself every day. Whether it's related to physical fitness or not, setting inspired goals is key to maintaining a healthy lifestyle. Cheers to a happy and healthy 2015!

NEWS BRIEFS

COMPILED BY KELLY LAFFEY

Nancy Atlas Is Back at Bay Street for Fireside Sessions in January and March

SAG HARBOR: The Nancy Atlas Fireside Sessions, sponsored by Dan's Papers, are returning to Bay Street Theater in Sag Harbor this for the second consecutive winter, with another outstanding lineup of guest musicians.

Word has spread quickly—the first show, on Friday, January 2, features Red Hot Chili Peppers drummer Chad Smith and has already sold out.

In 2014, the Nancy Atlas Project helped beat the winter blues with weekly shows that featured guests such as Smith, guitarist Andy Aledort, saxophone player Arno Hecht, pianist and singer Brian Mitchell, and violinist Randi Fishenfeld, just to name a few.

Several of the same artists are returning in 2015, and new names are coming too.

The 2015 edition of the Fireside Sessions series will take place in January and March. The January lineup has been announced and includes six shows.

Clark Gayton, a horn player of old school reggae and funk who has toured and recorded with Bruce Springsteen, performs January 9. Brian Mitchell brings back New Orleans-style sounds January 16. Randi Fishenfeld will join Atlas on both January 23 and January 24. Bluesman Bill Sims Jr. plays January 30.

Tickets are $20 each and are available at the Bay Street Theater box office at the corner of Bay and Main streets or online at baystreet.org.

Top 10 DansPapers.com Stories of 2014

EVERYWHERE: From breaking news to the celebrity scene, hilarious hoaxes to showcases of the best the Hamptons has to offer, DansPapers.com generated a lot of buzz in 2014. Here are the 10 posts that had the greatest readership, sparked the most social media interaction and created the most conversation.

To 'How I Met Your Mother' Fans: There Is No Farhampton

This informative post is for all those fans of the CBS sitcom How I Met Your Mother, which ended in March. Not only did the long-anticipated “meeting” happen in the Hamptons, most of the final season took place on the East End. But the “Hampton” of choice for writers was “Farhampton,” which you’ll have trouble finding on any map—although the video in this DansPapers.com post of a key character trying to buy a train ticket to Farhampton from the city will help.

Lions Released to Deal with Hamptons Deer Problems

This post holds the all-time record for Facebook likes and shares on DansPapers.com, with more than 31,000. The article by Dan Rattiner details South African billionaire Hans Van der Klerk’s plan to release lions in Bridgehampton to deal with the overpopulation of white-tail deer. It captured imaginations worldwide and became the subject of international media coverage.

10 Great Places for Lobster Rolls Out East

Lobster rolls are arguably the most sought-after summer lunch on the East End, and that’s confirmed by how often web surfers turned to our list of top spots to find the crustacean creation—all year long!

East End Celebrations Abound in 2014, More to Come in 2015

EAST END: The East End celebrated a number of milestones in 2014, with more significant anniversaries to come in 2015.

Suffolk Theater, which originally opened on December 30, 1933, celebrated the one-year anniversary of its grand re-opening in March. Hampton Coffee Company raised a few cups of their brilliant brew to its 20-year celebration. The Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons (ARF) celebrated the big 4-0 this past year, and Hampton Jitney celebrated 40 years as well. That’s not all, of course, but with the big ball about to drop, it’s time to look ahead to what’s coming down the pike in 2015.

We’re already marking our calendars with plenty of reasons to party. Both forks will be fired up as the towns of Southampton and Southold—both founded in 1640, though it’s unclear which settlement arrived first—will celebrate their 375th anniversary. Southampton kicks off its celebrations on New Year’s Eve, with a party at the Southampton Inn (including a birthday-themed dessert buffet). Stay tuned to DansPapers.com for updates on the year-long celebrations.

On the pop-culture front, Jaws, directed by East End resident Steven Spielberg, will celebrate 40 years in June. Locals have long-speculated that the movie was heavily inspired by larger-than-life Montauk fisherman Frank Mundus, and the Hamptons premiere was a night to remember.

The Ellen Hermanson Foundation, leading the fight against breast cancer on the East End and organizers of the popular Ellen’s Run 5K, will celebrate its 20th anniversary this summer.

Tate’s Bake Shop will turn 35 this year. America’s favorite cookie is still just as delectable.

In another tasty celebration, Dan’s Taste of Two Forks turns 5 in July, and throughout 2015 Dan’s Papers will celebrate turning 55!

List your big celebrations at Events.DansPapers.com.

Family Love Is in the Details on the North Fork

BY KELLY LAFFEY

The family-friendly North Fork has all the fixins' for a country vacation. Sheep and the occasional horse dot the farms along Main Road. White churches with stately steeples watch over small stretches of businesses. Bedtimes come early, but local wines flow into the night, and small coffee shops welcome revelers bright and early.

With its obvious appeal, the North Fork offers a unique take on family friendly entertainment, shunning cookie-cutter activities for the kind of days depicted in Norman Rockwell paintings. What it lacks in high-energy locales, the North Fork—especially Love Lane, Mattituck—makes up for with a day's adventure infused with culture for kids of any age.

Start your Love Lane trip off at the Village Cheese Shop, located at the south end of the street, where kids are welcome to sample one of the many international varieties housed in the glass cases. Owner Rosemary Batcheller is more than happy to explain the origins and flavors of each cheese, and she notes that kids have sensitive palates and will be able to taste the differences between each sampling. For even more of a departure from Kraft Singles, the Village Cheese Shop's family style fondue is a great option. Choose from a number of homemade fondues. Rosemary says that the Italian version, made with aged Asiago, Asiago fresco and fontina, is a kid-pleaser. The small dining room is greenhouse-style, allowing in any ray of sunlight winter will give. (Nearby Cutchogue, just three miles east, claims to be the sunniest spot in New York State.)

After the savory, it's time for something sweet next door at the Love Lane Sweet Shoppe. The store is filled with nostalgic candies that prompt parents to fondly remember childhood days. Among the selections are multiple varieties of gummy watermelon slices, Neco Wafers, Charleston Chews and Pop Rocks. In addition, there's an entire section devoted to Godiva chocolates. And, as this is wine country, Love Lane Sweet Shoppe stocks Lolita wine glasses, hand-painted to celebrate any number of occasions, in addition to other specialty gifts.

While the kids munch on the candy, head over to the Roanoke Vineyards tasting room. Though a tasting room may not immediately evoke images of family time, Roanoke Vineyards is a comfy shop equipped with games, welcoming older kids to play Scrabble or mancala as parents re-tox with a flight of Roanoke. The tasting room also carries a full lineup of Sagaponack's Wölffer Estate Vineyard wines, as well as local beers to keep the hops lovers happy. Cozy up in one of the leather chairs and let the family conversation flow.

Just down the street is Altman's Needlepoint, the antithesis to today's digital age. Though their classes cater more to adults and older kids, children of all ages can reserve a private session in everything from needlepoint to knitting.

New scarf in hand, it may be time for a sit-down meal. Just across the street is Lombardi's Love Lane Market, owned and operated by the same family behind Lombardi's on the Bay in Patchogue as well as Lombardi's on the Sound in Port Jefferson. Newly opened this fall, Lombardi's offers a number of gourmet Italian items—including Mama Lombardi's full line of homemade sauces—as well as fresh, made-to-order foods. Kids can marvel at the cooks tossing pizza into the air, before expertly hauling the pies into the brick oven. If they're not too full, Lombardi's "Nutella Bar" incorporates everyone's favorite spread into a variety of desserts. There's Panini con Nutella with fresh strawberries and bananas, as well as frutti di bosco con Nutella and a mini cannoli con Nutella. In addition, Lombardi's offers panini and freshly prepared salads, all available to enjoy while sitting at the dine-in counter overlooking the street.

Of course, the most obviously kid-friendly stop on the street is also Love Lane's newest. Love Lane Toys recently opened in the corner spot formerly occupied by BookHampton. Kids will enjoy sifting through the classic toys and 2014 top-sellers.

With its whimsical shops and hands-on family entertainment, the overwhelming consensus is that Love Lane has been aptly named. But until the 1920s, Love Lane was called Railroad Avenue, indicating—vacationers and day-trippers take note—it's proximity to the Mattituck Long Island Railroad station. Just to the north of the tracks, couples at the turn of the 20th century would take carriage rides together down to the creek, earning that portion of the street the name "Lovers' Lane." The moniker for the entire stretch stuck, inviting today's couples and families to leave their hearts on Love Lane in Mattituck.

East Hampton Library to Honor Eli Wallach

BY JOAN BAUM

A never-before-seen video of Eli Wallach reading the award-winning screenplay Visiting Mr. Green presents, in the words of Jeff Baron, who wrote the play, "the best chance" to see this extraordinary actor "live." The video will be shown January 10 at The East Hampton Library.

Wallach, who died on June 24, 2014, lived in East Hampton with his wife, the actress Anne Jackson. They were married for 66 years. A onetime lifeguard, Wallach "loved the water," says his son Peter, and had "many friends in the arts in the Hamptons." Wallach first rented near a marina and then moved to a bigger house near Main Beach in East Hampton. What was unusual about Wallach, Baron notes, was that this man who so loved the theater was loved back by directors, fellow actors, dramatists and screenwriters. "He took his talent and celebrity seriously and humbly. He always had time to talk to a stranger. He was always willing to donate his time for a cause he believed in, or to a first play by an author he never heard of," as with Baron. A novelist and screenwriter as well as a playwright, Baron has met all manner of stars, and Wallach, in his opinion, was in a class by himself—a brilliant actor and a generous human being, "the most respectful collaborator I've ever worked with."

It's fitting that the video by Peter Wallach, shot October 3, 2003 with three cameras, will be shown at the library. Eli Wallach frequently gave his time and energy to library events. The tribute, organized by library director Dennis Fabiszak, will feature the video and Baron, who will give the behind-the-scenes story of Visiting Mr. Green. The play premiered with Wallach June 20, 1996 at the Berkshire Theatre Festival and so far has had over 400 productions in 45 countries... and counting (it's now playing in Paris, Prague and Bucharest). As far as Baron is concerned, the play could have run forever at the Union Square Theater in the city, but Wallach, a devoted family man, wanted to spend time with his wife, and the play had no part for her. It has only two male characters: Mr. Green, an 86-year-old widower, who narrowly escapes being hit by a car driven recklessly by a young corporate executive. The court orders the executive to make weekly visits to Mr. Green for six months, appointments that begin with comedic overtones (Wallach had a gift for being funny, Baron points out, and perfect timing), but soon develop into moving revelatory exchanges.

Wallach preferred theater over film and particularly enjoyed performing in plays by Tennessee Williams (Wallach's Broadway debut was in The Rose Tattoo) and Arthur Miller (Marilyn Monroe adored Wallach and would sometimes babysit for him and Jackson). Baron cites Wallach's rare stage ability to listen. In a movie, as he points out, the camera cuts to an actor on the director's command, but on stage, an actor is on view all the time. Only a real pro, like Wallach, knows how to project listening when it's not his turn to recite lines. Of course, Wallach's film career, which began in 1956 with Elia Kazan's Baby Doll, has become legendary and includes over 90 films and as many TV dramas, like Wallach's role as Mr. Freeze in the Batman series in the '60s. There typically comes a time in a stage actor's career, Baron observes, when L.A. beckons. Most go. Not Wallach, who saw such a move as personally and professionally disruptive to the life he loved in New York. Wallach was an unusually versatile character actor, meaning "you look like a leading actor but you don't have the classical good looks." The best roles, Baron adds, go to character actors.

Eli Wallach and Jeff Baron

Baron has written a follow-up to Visiting Mr. Green called Mr. Green Opens the Door. Set six years after the first play (Mr. Green is now 92) and featuring other characters, the play has just opened in Munich. No Wallach, of course, but certainly, Wallach-inspired.

East Hampton Library Remembers Eli Wallach will take place on Saturday, January 10, 1-3:30 p.m. Free, but reservations a must: call 631-324-0222, ext. 3.

The Four Seasons of Hamptons Pop Culture

BY LEE MEYER

It's hard to believe that 2014 is almost over. So much happened over the course of this year that it's easy to forget all the crazy, exciting stuff that occurred. With the world so full of real-life drama, it's important to remember all the "pop drama" that keeps us gasping and laughing. And let's face it, folks—the East End is chock full of pop drama, thanks to the crazy, wonderful personalities that populate it throughout the year.

Oh, winter—once the holiday excitement is finished, there's not a lot to look forward to during the first months of the year. No, I'm totally kidding! The beginning of 2014 was super-exciting. Take, for example, Sag Harborite Billy Joel beginning his historic residency at Madison Square Garden—the monthly concerts have proven so popular that his residency will continue well into 2015. The Golden Globe Awards in January seemed to love The Wolf of Wall Street, based on the career of Hamptons regular Jordan Belfort, who was embroiled in a high-profile fraud scandal on Wall Street in the 1980s. Leonardo DiCaprio played the controversial figure and won a Golden Globe for his work. Other wintery highlights: Water Mill's Jennifer Lopez returned to judge American Idol; NBC pulled the plug on The Michael J. Fox Show, a ratings-stunted comedy starring the Quogue resident; CNN canceled AC 360 Later, a lighter, late-night news show hosted by Quogue's Anderson Cooper; and comedienne and talk show

thinkstock.com

host Joy Behar moved to Sag Harbor. As winter wound down, the Academy Awards honored films featuring East End favorites, with Blue Jasmine (featuring Alec Baldwin) and Her (starring Amagansett's Scarlett Johansson) being nominated for multiple awards.

The flowers started to bloom in the spring, but it wasn't all roses and daisies in the world of pop culture—Amagansett power couple Gwyneth Paltrow and Chris Martin went through one of the most curious breakups in recent memory. Paltrow drew lots of criticism for her goop blog post "Conscious Uncoupling," which detailed her pretentious-sounding philosophy about separating from Martin. Paltrow also angered some when she compared herself to working moms on E! "I think to have a regular job and be a mom is not as, of course there are challenges, but it's not like being on set," the star said. Martin proceeded to date 24-year-old Jennifer Lawrence, and Paltrow actually gave them her blessing! Mix in a bonkers feud with East Hampton's Martha Stewart, and Paltrow had a tumultuous 2014. Here's hoping things quiet down for her soon!

Luckily, spring wasn't all breakups and turmoil. Hamptons visitor Hugh Jackman drew rave reviews for his performance as Wolverine in X-Men: Days of Future Past, and ScarJo stole the show in Captain America: The Winter Soldier. And How I Met Your Mother's final season—which took place in the fictional Far Hampton—ended its run with a poignant episode that divided fans' opinions.

Summer is the busiest time of the year for the East End, and this year was no exception. Hamptons-set medical dramedy Royal Pains returned in June, featuring actual Hamptons locales. The "krazy" Kardashian family spent their summer in the Hamptons for Kourtney and Khloé Take the Hamptons, which is currently airing on E! The Kardashians set up shop in Southampton with their pop-up DASH boutique, while Kourtney's boyfriend Scott—who grew up in the Hamptons and went to the Ross School—got into some trouble with his hard-partying. Khloé and Scott even made an appearance on the season finale of Royal Pains!

As the leaves started turning in the fall, the 2014-2015 TV season commenced, with ABC's soapy Revenge returning for a fourth season and Showtime debuting The Affair, a moody mystery/drama set and filmed in Montauk. The Affair has earned several nominations in the upcoming Golden Globes. Revenge has a spotty track record when it comes to its Hamptons accuracy, and this season is no exception. For weekly Revenge recaps, head to DansPapers.com.

And we'd be remiss if we didn't mention Sagaponack's Jimmy Fallon, who had a second child, Frances Cole, on December 3.

That's all for 2014. Have a great new year and we'll return with more pop culture panache in 2015!

THE HOBBIT: THE BATTLE OF THE FIVE ARMIES

It has been said that the only certain things in life are death and taxes. To this we must add the certainty that, come Christmas, a film promising the "final battle between good and evil" will hit the multiplexes and take in a big wad of cash.

Gloomy settings and low, guttural male voices will predominate—direct sunlight and women will be in short supply—and vast armies will descend, marching in perfect formation across barren landscapes. And that's what really gets in the way, isn't it? There are always attempts at explanations for these ruthlessly efficient armies that appear out of nowhere—sometimes the explanation is magical, sometimes it's technological—but the questions still linger: who trains and equips these vast armies? Where are the supply chains? What do they eat in these barren wastes they march through? How is such brutal discipline maintained? This year's version of the ritual features the Peter Jackson directed The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug, and, if we are to believe the copy, this will be the last of the films based on Tolkien's "masterpiece" The Hobbit. Now Orcs, Dwarves, Elves, Hobbits, Dragons—for these we can suspend our disbelief. But FIVE vast armies? What are they going to eat?

MR. TURNER

Mr. Turner, directed by Mike Leigh, is a biopic about the revolutionary 19th-century British painter J.M.W. Turner. Turner is played by Timothy Spall as a gruff, eccentric man with neither much patience for the trappings or flattery of fame, nor much appetite for analyzing what he does or finding his place in the art world. This seems realistic, if perhaps problematic for a biographical film—artists of Turner's skill and single-mindedness spend most of their time making art, which isn't that much to watch. And, as with the 2000 biopic Pollock, another film about an inarticulate renegade artist, it's left to supporting characters in Mr. Turner to make grand statements about the importance of Turner's work—a device that feels stagy and yet is necessary to get the point across. The film features beautiful scenery, the inspiration for much of Turner's work.

THE GAMBLER

Mark Wahlberg has been in the news lately for his efforts to be granted a pardon in Massachusetts for a felony assault conviction that he received in his youth. Maybe while he's at it, he should try to get Massachusetts to pardon him for the hairstyle he sports in this film. In The Gambler, Wahlberg plays Jim Bennett, a risk-taker by nature who leads a double life: by day, a mild-mannered professor, by night a high-stakes gambler. In both cases, his hair looks like it's about to crawl off of his head and into a gutter.

Ringing in 2015 in Style with... Shopping!

BY KENDRA SOMMERS

Wishing all shoppers happy holidays and a bright new year!

You finally found the perfect outfit for your New Year's Eve fete, but what to do about your hair? I recently tried Twister, a new, easy-to-use DIY hair curler, to get the perfect tresses with just the right amount of body. Twister comes with quick instructions to create beautiful, loose curls. Best of all, Twister attaches to your blow dryer, drying your hair as it curls, so it's truly damage free and leaves your hair perfectly healthy. Use it before your big night out, and you'll be ready for that midnight kiss. For more information, visit forstyler.com.

Wearing a sleeveless dress or a cropped sweater under your winter coat? Keep your skin soft and smooth this winter with DERMAdctor's KP Duty Body Scrub. This dual-action exfoliator combines the benefits of a chemical peel and a microdermabrasion into a single, easy-to-use formulation. It's perfect for all dry skin solutions, and specifically caters to dry, flaky patches of skin associated with keratosis pilaris. Exfoliate twice a week for smooth and radiant skin. This product is dermatologist tested and approved, allergy tested, non-drying, and non-irritating with no animal testing. It is free of fragrance, dye and oil. After a single use, my occasionally bumpy and dry upper arms are smoother than ever. Available at sephora.com.

If you're throwing a New Year's Party, you're going to want Be Mixed, a collection of zero calorie and all-natural cocktail mixers. Simply purchase your preferred alcohol and head to be-mixed.com to find out how to craft the perfect drink. Be Mixed comes in fun, 4 fl. oz. containers, so guests can even DIY their own drink with their favorite holiday liquor. I tried the "ginger honey lime" mixer and all I can say is—delish! Perfect for anyone who needs a little liquid courage to tell that someone special they've had a crush forever... 'Tis the season!

The good people at Maui Brand sent our editorial office some samples of their "raw" and "white" sugar recently. We quite liked it. And we loved that it's domestically sourced—grown 100% in the USA. Available in handy jars and individual packets. Check out the insider tips and recipes at mauisugars.com.

Your favorite "modern general" store in Sag Harbor—Sylvester & Co.—has a new, revamped website at sylvesterandco.com. Now it's even easier to ogle and shop for the perfect gifts and accessories!

Over the school holiday vacations, you may notice a need to keep your kids or your guests' kids occupied—and you'll also want to pry them away from the TV. It's not easy in the winter, especially when it's too cold to spend a long time outdoors. Pick up a copy of Tate's Bake Shop Baking with Kids for a fun and creative solution. Tate's own Kathleen King began working on her famous chocolate chip cookie recipe when she was just 11 years old. In her stand-up, laminated cookbook, you can make and erase notes as King shares recipes she created especially for junior bakers. You just might have a budding baker in the making! The cookbook includes 20 tried-and-tested recipes as well as tips, basic techniques and more. Available at Tate's Bake Shop, 43 North Sea Road in Southampton and online at tatesbakeshop.com.

Here's another creative idea: go to the museum! Holiday Art Workshops take place at the Parrish Art Museum, December 29, 30 and 31. Each day of the three-hour Holiday Art Workshops focuses on a different medium. The theme for Monday, December 29 is painting with watercolor and tempera; Tuesday features sculpture with wood, wire, and modeling clay; and Wednesday's workshop will focus on collage with mixed media. Children may be enrolled for all three days or fewer. The fee is $40 per session; $30 per session for members of the Parrish Art Museum. Register for the Holiday Art Workshops online at parrishart.org or call 631-283-2118 x130. And all ages are invited to Holiday Fun for Families (no registration required) on December 26 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Send your shopping news, including sales, new inventory and special events, to shoptil@danspapers.com.

Be Interesting - Plant an Edible Landscape

BY LAURA KLAHRE

“Is it local?” is one of the most frequent questions I’m asked at our tasting room in Cutchogue in regard to the provenance of the fruit my husband makes into wine and the honey I have on the shelf. Food miles and where the food we eat is grown are topics near and dear to my heart, so I’m happy to proudly answer, “Yes, all from the North Fork.”

More and more people are interested in making food as “local” as possible. By growing what we need near where we live, we decrease the food miles associated with long-distance transportation. We also get the freshest produce money can buy, and we are encouraged to eat in season.

As I have finished all my field work in the bee yards for the season, winter is the perfect time for reflection and a time to start thinking about the path forward next year. How to make more food, more local? The victory gardens of WWI and WWII have morphed into the community gardens popular today. But, I think there is still room for further metamorphosis.

With little support and with few other options for accessing fresh produce, residents in urban centers including New York, Detroit and Oakland continue to transform blighted vacant lots into vibrant and productive community gardens. Garden plots also help people gain a greater appreciation for where food comes from, and they beautify and increase property values in the surrounding area. The concepts of a community garden need to be extended and amplified. Slow Food USA, including the East End Chapter, and local schools with school gardens have paved the way.

Tear up your boring residential green lawn and choose an edible landscape. Businesses in need of landscaping, libraries, hospitals, hotels and churches with lawn space can help scale up this effort and create even more of an impact. The resulting fruits and vegetables could be shared with your family, friends and employees, donated to local food pantries, or sold to local retailers. If you don’t have the time to pick the fruit, local food organizations including Long Island Cares collaborate with partners to glean local gardens and farms, getting the fresh food to people in need. Alternatively, perhaps register your site on neighborhoodfruit.com, a nationwide website designed to help people find and share fruit ripe for picking so that the food does not go to waste.

According to a NASA-sponsored study, there are over 31 million acres of lawns in the United States, making it the nation’s largest irrigated crop by area. This means that there are millions of acres of underutilized land that could be a productive fruit orchard, an herb garden, or a vegetable garden—or all three! Edible plants come in nearly all shapes and sizes and can perform the same landscape functions as ornamental plants. Where you have wanted to plant a shade tree, plant a fruit tree. In another area, plant a few high bush blueberries instead of a deciduous ornamental shrub. Put pots of herbs on your patio. Include cherry tomatoes in a window box or hanging basket. Replace a Japanese barberry hedge with gooseberries. Train raspberries up your fence. Plant ostrich fern as a ground cover and, in the spring, eat the fiddleheads raw, steamed, boiled, or sautéed with butter and garlic. While these ideas cannot solve hunger, they are an important dietary supplement.

It is cold out so now is the time to plan! Consider planting a garden instead of a lawn! Look at the meals that you are preparing for the holidays. How great would it be if you grew more of the ingredients yourself? While my dreams are always bigger than what I actually accomplish in reality, I’m definitely going to plant a few blueberry bushes this spring and have less lawn to mow. ☺

Top 8 Cookbooks for Holidays and Every Day

BY STACY DERMONT

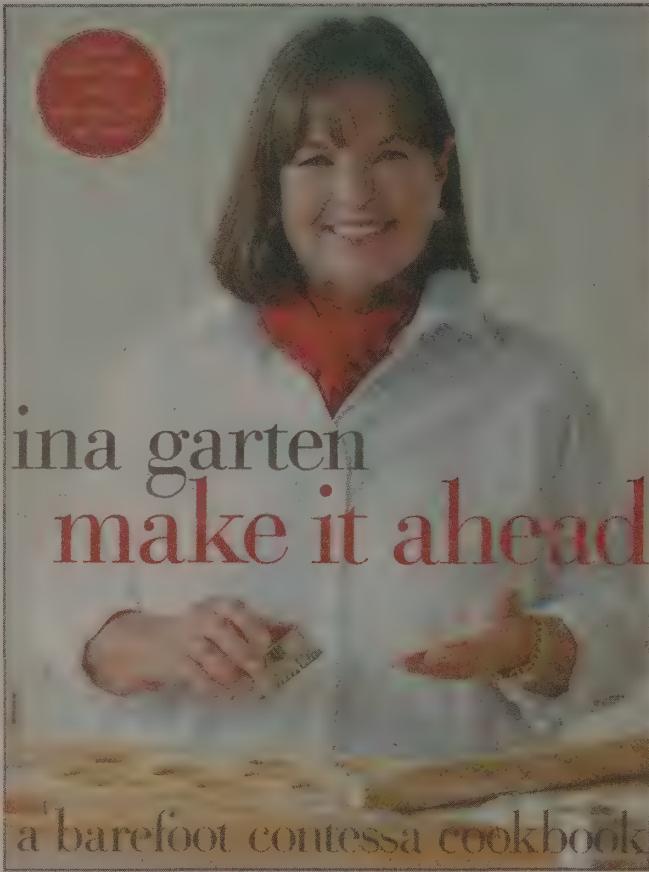

We're well into my favorite time of year—when friends old and new ask me for cooking and baking advice and secrets. I do have a lot of tips—though most seem like common sense—and I'm happy to help.

In developing my first website, hamptonsepiculture.com (launching in 2015), I've been compiling a number of "Top Eight" lists. Everybody has top 10 lists—I'm more discriminating. Anyway, here are my top eight standby cookbooks right now—not that the list is subject to much change. "The old standbys" are exactly that.

Nowadays, between our great local bookstores and Amazon, even long out-of-print books are just a few clicks away.

1. The Good Housekeeping Illustrated Cookbook (The Hearst Corporation, 1980). My grandmother gave me my first copy. I think I'm now on my third. The best cookbooks inevitably get destroyed in the kitchen. This one is pretty comprehensive and features nicely cheesy '70s photographs of most of the dishes. Believe it or not, 1980 was in the "P.S." era—pre-salsa. Apart from this exotic condiment, this cookbook has pretty much everything you'll ever need.

2. The Ball Blue Book of Preserving (Hearthmark, 2013). This canning bible is reprinted every few years and is sold in most hardware stores. There are many recipes for a wide variety of preparations using fresh fruits and vegetables. The products don't have to be canned to be enjoyed. Most recipes are easily cut in half. (Contains multiple salsa recipes.)

3. Sarabeth's Bakery: From My Hands to Yours (Rizzoli, 2011). Every copy of this book sold on Levine's website (sarabeth.com) is signed by the James Beard award winning author herself. That's so Sarabeth. I know because she's a dear friend. But I'm not a fan of her book because she's a friend—reading her book deepened my admiration of her work and led me to write about her, which is how we met. I'm not a "fan girl" by nature, this book is truly outstanding—a well-written introduction to Sarabeth's baking know-how both for beginners and for more advanced bakers. If you bake your way through it, you'll feel like an expert—and no doubt you'll have many fans of your own when you reach the delicious end.

Her new cookbook Sarabeth's Good Morning Cookbook is due out in the fall of 2015 from Rizzoli. I'll probably have to make room for it in this list. I know it's going to be gorgeous. I visited Sarabeth's Water Mill house last month when the chapter-opening photos were being shot. AND I got to eat some of the delish leftovers!

4. Loaves and Fishes Cookbook: Delectable Recipes from East Hampton's Famous Food Shop by Anna Pump (Loaves & Fishes Press). If I could, I'd hire (Continued on page 76)

Sarabeth Levine in her Water Mill home

Loaves & Fishes to cater my every affair. But I'll happily settle for cooking from his great, no-nonsense cookbook. Pump was a mentor to Ina Garten and it shows—there's an emphasis on fresh, seasonal ingredients and simple preparations throughout.

5. Loaves and Fishes Party Cookbook (Harper & Row, 1990). Who says you can't judge a book by its cover? This cookbook sports my favorite book jacket of all time. There's just something about its tasteful simplicity and implied generosity—much like its mother-and-daughter authors', Anna and Sybille Pump's, recipes. Anna still runs the famous Loaves and Fishes Food Store in Sagaponack. Sybille (now Sybille van Kempen) runs the popular Bridgehampton Inn, which is currently expanding to double its capacity. From ice skating party to formal wedding, there's a menu for your every celebration in this book.

6. The Farm: Rustic Recipes for a Year of Incredible

We're into my favorite time of year, when friends ask for cooking and baking advice... Everybody has Top 10 Lists. I'm more discriminating.

Food by Ian Knauer (Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, 2012). I always enjoy reading cookbooks that are linked to family farms and farming. So rightly synergistic. This small, colorful volume is a favorite of mine because many of the recipes can be made solely from ingredients found in my own garden. For instance, now the only store-bought ingredients in my tomato sauce are olive oil and black pepper. I was a little disappointed that Knauer's famous woodchuck pâté recipe is not included in this book—but I can't say that I really miss it.

7. Cooking with Jams and Chutneys, Recipes from Beth's Farm Kitchen (Beth Linskey, 2011) by Beth Linskey isn't just for people like me who are really into canning jams and chutneys for holiday gift giving. It's also for people who love to eat really good jams and chutneys all year. It contains the best, easiest-to-follow instructions around. I use it for my pepper jelly and for ideas on how to incorporate all the jams I make into meals.

8. It's All Good: Delicious, Easy Recipes That Will Make You Look Good and Feel Great by Gwyneth Paltrow and Julia Turshen (Grand Central Life & Style, 2013). Okay, don't hate me because Gwyneth is beautiful. Last year there was a surge of controversy surrounding this book that was just stupid. Rumor had it in the media that she didn't write it. Read it and you can tell that she did, with her esteemed partner Julia Turshen, right down to the use of the F-word in the intro. Movie stars can cook too. Did anyone question the authorship of Orson Welles's recipes or Marlon Brando's liberal use of butter? It put me in mind of the mindless criticism of the movie Julie & Julia—‘how much drama is there, really, in cooking?’ Obviously the critics who came up with this quibble don't know the first thing about cooking.

So about this cookbook: I like it because the recipes are so very simple, I seem to always have the ingredients at hand, and I'm confident in making substitutions—which the authors encourage.

Ina Garten's latest cookbook, Make It Ahead (Clarkson Potter, 2014), arrived on my desk just last month. I haven't the time to try it out yet, but I plan to delve in over the holiday break. Garten promises “delicious recipes that taste just as good—or even better!—when they're made in advance.” I'm totally down with that! Plus it features the photography of one of my favorite food photographers—Quentin Bacon. With a name like that he's got to be good!

great food in a comfortable setting

‘Tis the Season for Chocolate

BY GENEVIEVE HORSBURGH

The holiday season is a time for traditions and family, and for me that means a lot of cooking, baking and eating! Around this time of year, the baking bug bites me and I can't help but stock up on all the essentials.

Fudgy Chocolate Cookies have become a staple in my baking repertoire for the holidays. They are deliciously dark, dramatically chocolate and utterly irresistible.

I like my cookies chewy on the inside with a good crunch on the outside. I found a version of this recipe back in 2012 in a holiday edition of Rachael Ray magazine. Although that foodie queen proclaims to be not much of a baker, I simply adore this recipe and was hooked the first time I made them—and so was my family! I've quadrupled the recipe because one batch (or two, or three) just wasn't enough to satisfy my crowd.

Another staple I can't wait to make when it's cold out is my Heavenly Hot Chocolate. Forget about those packages with freeze-dried bits that call themselves marshmallows! I like to use real milk, real cocoa, a few dashes of pure vanilla and a mountain of marshmallows or homemade whipped cream.

Nothing warms my soul like sitting around with friends and family, sipping some fresh, hot cocoa and munching on fudgy chocolate cookies.

Happy Holidays from this foodie and her family to yours!

FUDGY CHOCOLATE COOKIES

4 cups sugar
2 sticks (16 tbsps) unsalted butter, at room temperature
1 tsp salt
4 tbsps vanilla extract
4 eggs
2 cups unsweetened cocoa powder (I use Hershey's)
3 cups flour

1. Using stand mixer, cream sugar, butter and salt until fully incorporated. Scrape down the bowl, add the egg and vanilla and beat until well blended.
2. Slowly add in your cocoa until thoroughly incorporated. Add the flour slowly until combined.
3. At this point, I like to let my dough chill in the fridge for about an hour. I think this step makes for an even "fudgier" cookie.
4. Preheat your oven to 350° when ready to bake. Line your baking sheets with parchment paper (so your cookies don't stick!)
5. Scoop out 1 tsp of dough at a time (I like to use my teaspoon cookie scoop for even cookies)
6. Roll the dough into golf-sized balls and place evenly spaced dough balls on your cookie sheet.
7. Using the bottom of a glass, flatten each dough ball to about 1/4-1/2-inch thickness. The thicker they are, the "fudgier" they'll be.
8. This step is up to you. Time to top your cookies with something festive like edible gold dust, white sprinkles or red and green sprinkles—use your imagination and think HOLIDAY.
9. Bake for 10-12 minutes. Let cool on the pan for 2 minutes, then transfer to a cooling rack.

Will yield about 8 dozen cookies.

HEAVENLY HOT CHOCOLATE FOR TWO

2 cups milk
4 tbsps unsweetened cocoa (I use Hershey's)
3 tbsps sugar
pinch of salt
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract

1. Heat your milk in a small saucepan over medium heat. You want it to come to a light simmer, not boil.
2. In a small bowl, combine cocoa, sugar and salt. Divide evenly between two mugs.
3. Once the milk is heated, add in the vanilla, stir to combine.
4. Evenly divide the milk between the two mugs. Stir to combine.
5. Top with your favorite: marshmallows, whipped cream, etc.

Enjoy!

Hamptons Homebrewing: Beer on Your Own Time!

BY EMMETT HAQ

Many of us on the East End are beer enthusiasts, beer aficionados, beer fans—in short, we love beer. Thanks to the craft beer explosion, there's an impossibly wide variety of brews to choose from today, but the most rewarding beer to drink is the one that you've made yourself.

I've been homebrewing for about two years now, and each brewing cycle is exciting and unique—I've often compared it to cooking, and for the first part of the process, that's essentially what it is. Two years ago, after a lot of hemming and hawing, I ponied up the 200-odd dollars for a beginner's brew kit, containing a fermenting bucket, bottling equipment, a bottle capper, an airlock, a hydrometer and a starter set of ingredients, along with an extensively detailed instruction booklet. I went the modern route and bought my equipment from MonsterBrew.com, a reputable homebrewing website which also sells bulk ingredients, bottle caps and other necessities, but there are a number of homebrewing supply stores for those on the East End who prefer a more personal touch. These include Back Alley Brew Shop and Hoptron Brewtique, both in Patchogue, Karp's Hardware in East Northport and Arbor Wine & Beer Making Supply in Islip (homebrewing supply stores have not entirely made their way out to the Hamptons yet, but they're slowly creeping closer).

As far as the actual brewing is concerned, an incalculable amount of it is about luck and improvisation, once you've got the basic elements down. All beer is composed of malt, hops, yeast, and water—everything else is incidental (or instrumental, depending on what you're brewing). I've made six batches since I started homebrewing (each batch equals out to about 40 to 50 servings of beer) and only three of them have been successful. The three successful batches are the three most recent ones—trial and error is your best friend when you're learning to brew on your own.

For a quick walk-through (this isn't intended to be an actual set of instructions; those can be found with your brewing kit and are far more detailed), the first stage generally involves heating your malt and water for some time, and eventually adding hops as it reaches a boil. Next, you will transfer your wort (the mixture of hops, malt and water) to a glass carboy or fermentation bucket (entirely up to your preference), where you will add yeast before sealing with an airlock. Then, the brew has to be left alone to ferment for at least two weeks; certain styles necessitate more time, and lagers require a colder environment, usually between 45° and 60° Fahrenheit. After fermenting, you'll either keg or bottle your beer. If bottling, you'll transfer the wort to a secondary bucket and add boiled sugar to induce carbonation, and then siphon your beer into bottles, which you'll seal with your handy bottle capper. I only have experience with bottling, which is the less expensive option, as you can reuse any empty pry-off beer bottles sitting around your house; but it's a far more irksome process, since it involves siphoning beer safely into 50 bottles, and potentially overfilling them and spilling noncarbonated beer all over yourself.

In my experience, you ought to wait at least two weeks after bottling before you crack open one of your creations—and don't refrigerate them until they're exactly where you want them, as refrigeration will slow the carbonation process. The longer you let the bottles sit, the more complex and flavorful your finished product will be.

This, of course, is just a very brief overview, but the world of homebrewing is open to anyone with a taste for beer, and an ambition to fully explore your palate.

I look forward to trying your brews!

UNDER A MILLION

Bargains on the East End.

Reflecting on 2014 and Building Toward 2015

BY WALLACE FIGG

The past year was remarkable for East End real estate, but what of the future? As we turn toward 2015, we've asked an esteemed group of industry insiders to share what they envision for the market next year.

"When I reflect back over three decades as a broker in the Hamptons and on the North Fork, I have seen several bull markets, a few corrections and two recessions—this last one was the worst. But the ascent was quite the ride—2014 was the best year since the crash. When the stock market rises 30%, plus or minus, East End real estate, and art, will enjoy the ride! I predict 2015 will be a steady climb, with select markets doing better than others as the demographics differ. As always, inventory levels and demand will play important roles." —Judi Desiderio, CEO, Town & Country Real Estate

"As far as predictions for 2015, all indications look very good. The Hamptons market is extremely hot, and Wall Street bonuses should help keep the momentum. Since good land is so hard to find, a lot of buyers are buying the new construction and speculative projects available. It's hard for some of the older homes to compete with the new technology and bells and whistles that are now standard in today's new buildings, but they're still an option for some if the property is special. As everyone knows, a house can be updated but property and location cannot." —Susan Breitenbach, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, The Corcoran Group

New construction allows for all of the bells and whistles.

"Quogue and Remsenberg are hotter than ever. Buyers are getting it—they see the pricing value, old-fashioned charm and easy commute from Manhattan that they can enjoy by buying in these communities. Inventory is shrinking. The best land deals in Water Mill, Bridgehampton and Sagaponack are going to contract and new developments are breaking ground. Waterfront homes that are FEMA-compliant are in demand." —Enzo Morabito, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, Douglas Elliman Real Estate

Rooms with a view

"For 2015, I see a continuation of what we have seen this year—village properties being highly sought-after and demand for brand-new homes in desirable locations. Busy buyers want to show up with a toothbrush and have everything ready to go. I also imagine in 2015 we will be seeing more wine cellars, hopefully stocked with fine vintages from local wineries!" —Maz Crotty, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, Nest Seekers, International

"My prediction for 2015 is it should be a great year! Montauk is on a big upswing thanks to all of the media. Sales were very strong on the high end and the low end. Anything with a view moves quickly. I think that after the [Wall Street] bonuses come out, we will be seeing the same amount of action as we did this past winter." —Theresa Eurell, Licensed Real Estate Salesperson, Town & Country Real Estate

"2015 should be a positive environment for our real estate market. The inventory is still being absorbed at near-record rates. On the average, 40 to 50 homes are going into contract each week. As long as the stock market is stable, our market will prosper. The same areas that were active in 2014 should keep their upward movement—Bridgehampton and Sagaponack, south of the highway, will continue to be favored by the financial community. The villages of Southampton, East Hampton and Sag Harbor are always desirable. Montauk, the darling of the younger set, will continue its appeal. Keep your eyes on Shinnecock—now known as Southampton West—and Hampton Bays, their stars are rising." —Alan Schnurman, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, Saunders & Associates

"One thing we can be sure about is that the East End real estate market is very much dependent on the health of financial markets and global events. Many potential buyers only want new construction. Builders have demonstrated their confidence in the current and future market based upon the number of new homes you see all over the East End in various stages of completion. In 2015 if your new home doesn't have an outdoor kitchen and a fireplace, then you are probably not in the Hamptons." —Ernest Cervi, Executive Managing Director, Licensed Real Estate Broker, The Corcoran Group

"The North Fork has had two very good years, and I predict that 2015 is going to be even better. Waterfront homes are always in demand, and are a great value compared to the South Fork. New construction is picking up, partially due to lower inventory of existing homes for sale. More and more buyers are looking for property with a pool or the ability to add a pool—a real change for the conservative North Fork community." —Marie Beninati, Licensed Real Estate Broker, Beninati Associates

"The upcoming year looks to be robust for many reasons, not the least being the investment wave from Wall Street brokers and traders with record bonuses to shelter in resort and second-home properties. New construction is on the rise as comparable existing inventories continue to shrink. Buyers can acquire brand new state-of-the-art construction sited in upscale Hamptons enclaves as an alternative to existing and/or teardown inventory." —Lawrence Citarelli, Principal—L III Group, First Hampton International RE/Lawrence III Corp./Citadom Holdings

Now, more than ever, your fellow Long Islanders are in need of help from their neighbors. Lost jobs, closed businesses, devastation from Super Storm Sandy, foreclosures ... all have led to more people – adults and children – with empty plates on their tables.

HELP Fight HUNGER on Long Island

You can make a difference

FEEDS A CHILD
FOR 7 DAYS

During these difficult times, Island Harvest's mission to end hunger and reduce food waste on Long Island becomes even more vital. Your donation can make a big difference in someone's life.

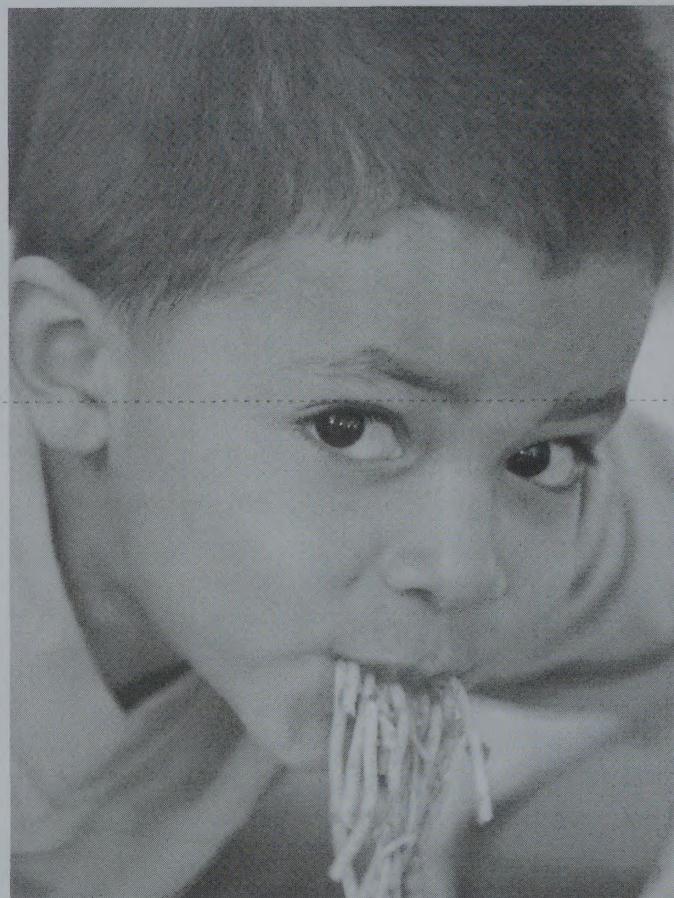

We will gratefully accept even your smallest donation.
Please contribute today!

Over 95 cents out of every one of your dollars goes directly to feeding and supporting Long Islanders who are hungry.

DID YOU KNOW THAT...

- More than 300,000 Long Islanders know hunger first-hand. This includes tens of thousands of children.
- Each week, nearly 42,000 Long Islanders access emergency food assistance.
- In 2013, Island Harvest collected and distributed more than 14 million pounds of food and product – that's over 10 million meals.
- Island Harvest moves food for pennies on the dollar by collecting good surplus food and relying on volunteers and donated services.
- Over 95 cents of every dollar contributed to Island Harvest supports our programs.

You can make your gift in honor or memory of a friend or loved one, or celebrate an accomplishment or event (see other side).
